The Wisdom of Friends

Some of you are not living your best life because your closest companions are fools.

Your friends determine the direction and quality of your life.

Discussion Guide

Recall a season of life (good or bad) and talk about how your friends at that time influenced and even determined what life ended up looking like during that time.

Read Proverbs 13:20

The proverb implies that the people you walk with most closely through life will have the most influence on you. That being true, how should that truth guide how we choose and nurture our closest relationships?

How are you currently being influenced by friendships and other relationship that may not be leading to your best life? What should you do about it?

Do some inventory on your closest friendships you've had and currently have. Who are your wisest, most God-fearing friends?

Are you connecting in relationships that help you grow and increase in the fear of the Lord? How can you take steps towards intentional meaningful relationships that lead to your best life?
